

Brainstorming For Change

In this activity, the teacher divides the classroom into groups of four or five people. The aim is to find solutions to political, economic or social problems within the poultry industry. The students work together and brainstorm large and small scale solutions to the given problem topic. After each group has completed a list of detailed solutions, take part in a discussion involving the rest of the class and talk about which of the solutions they see as viable options and why. Students could also produce a presentation on their topic and findings and present to the class with a time for dialog and discussion following.

Leadership Characteristics

This classroom leadership game helps students identify the characteristics of a good leader. The teacher divides the students into groups of two or three people. Each person in the group must recount a story of someone she feels is an influential leader. After each story, students should point out what characteristics they feel made the person in the story a good leader. At the end of the activity, the students draw up a list of all the characteristics of a good leader and stick them up on the walls around the classroom.
